“The news was too good to keep hidden. That’s why they called it Gospel.”
Ronnie Collier Stevens, The Path to Discipleship

Those two simple sentences have really challenged me. I keep pondering the first one: The news was too good to keep hidden.

The latest test results came back clear of cancer!

My son was accepted to med school!

They are going to have a baby!

I got the new job!

She made the cheer squad!

He got the scholarship!

What is the news that is too good to keep hidden? Think about your text group with your family or your closest girlfriends. Those group messages are a lifeline when you need prayer because the hard situations, hard relationships, and hard circumstances are meant to be shared. “Therefore, encourage one another and build one another up, just as you are doing” (1 Thessalonians 5:11).

We also share and celebrate the small and big milestones, the good news. Often the good news is not just limited to that small text group, but it is plastered on Facebook and Instagram for our family and a lifetime of friends to see.

Is that how we share the Gospel? It is news that is too good to keep hidden? When you think about the word “gospel” what do you think of? I think of a refuge. I think of someone who loves me in spite of the ugly layers that I wear. I think of undeserved grace. I think of redemption that lasts for eternity.

That is good news! How am I hiding it? How am I sharing it? What about you?

To God be the glory,

Ingram
